V. Reasoned statement under Rule 66.2(a)(ii) with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability; citations and explanations supporting such statement

1. statement

| | | | |
|-------------------------------|--------|-------------|-----|
| Novelty (N) | Claims | NONE | YES |
| | Claims | 1-24 | NO |
| Inventive Step (IS) | Claims | 1-24 | YES |
| | Claims | NONE | NO |
| Industrial Applicability (IA) | Claims | 1-24 | YES |
| | Claims | NONE | NO |

2. citations and explanations

Claims 1-24 lack an inventive step under PCT Article 33(3) as being obvious over Kolls, WO 9,607,134. Kolls discloses a system and method for networking and controlling vending machines comprising: a magnetic card (not shown) is passed through card reader 16 and the information from the magnetic strip of the magnetic card is read by card reader 16. Certain portions of or all of this magnetic information is transmitted over a communication line 40 to a remote credit verification location 46. Communication line 40 can take the form of a telephone line, dedicated telephone line, cellular communication line or a local area network. The type of communication line required will depend upon the location and use of a particular vending machine. A keypad 18 is also provided for entering key code information. A keypad with one or more keys can be provided, depending on the type of user input which may be required. In the case of a bank issued debit card, such as an ATM card, a personal identification number (PIN) may be required (see page 13).

Kolls fails to disclose all details' description of the system, such as encrypting the information before transmitting the information to the server and/or storing each device identification within each device.

However, official notice is taken that it is notorious old and well known in the art and required by the federal trade commission to encrypt financial information before transmitting the information through a medium for preventing unauthorized individuals from intercepting the information. Therefore, it would have been obvious for a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to encrypt the information of Kolls' system before transmitting the information to the server in order to provide a more secure network. With regard to having the device identification information within the device, Kolls discloses controlling the different products within a plurality of vending machines. A code an/or an identification would be required in order to identify each machine and their products in order to provide optimal aid to customers. Therefore, it would have been an obvious expedient.
